Vocational High School

5727 Sohl Avenue

Hammond, Indiana

ore of the city

Hammond Technical Vocational High School has an enrollment of 1840. The school is an integral part of the total educational program of the Hammond Public School System. The School program as a whole, shall reflect a sincere belief in and an understanding of the principles of democracy as well as a concern for the worth of the individual. Students are individuals with differences in capacity for learning, aptitudes, and aspirations. The needs of our students can best be met by periodic changes in the curriculum in the light of changing technologies, and the changing needs of the community. The school has a responsibility to adults in the community who are interested in self-improvement, training to meet present job demands or preparation for future occupations.

Tech is situated within the nucleus of a revolving community of businesses and industry, and is a significant part of it. Students from surrounding areas attend Hammond Tech. When they come, they're often unsure of what goals they will strive for in the future. At this time their dreams become realities and the seemingly impossible comes true. Tech's broad academic preparation, in addition to practical experiences in the laboratory and shops, provides superior occupations for these students. As they go, some leave as auto mechanics, stenographers, and I.B.M. operators. There are students, also, who proceed to college to further their education. Most important, they leave as Tech graduates. Tech has taught them the skills of vocational professions that will enable them to become part of a society that rotates around the core—Hammond Tech.

Tech Spectacular brings out talent

In honor of Tech's Golden Anniversary, a Tech Spectacular was presented. Many Tech students participated in this talent show. The program included singing, acting, and dancing. Two performances were given, one in the afternoon, April 18, and one that evening. Winning act in the afternoon performance was "Dear Liza," a skit performed by Charles Schumpp and Gary Stickley. Winners were chosen by the loudest applause from the student audience. The evening performance closed with Joan O'Neal winning first place for her song, "Harper Valley P.T.A." All winners received trophies. Several "Laugh-In" segments provided highlights in Tech's history as well as amusing anecdotes.

Special guest performance included, "Those were the Days" done by Tech grads of the "50's," the introduction of members of the 1940 State Championship Basketball Team, and J. Harold Snyder, a former Coach, who gave Tech the name of Tigers.

Teachers who were formerly bandmen practiced together to form the Faculty Band. One of the best accepted features was the faculty women's Flag Patrol.

Choirs try choreography for first time

Last year the Tech Choir presented their first concert with choreography. Weeks in advance they began their dancing lessons.

Concert Choir selections included a rousing "Step to the Reor," the romantic "Believe in Love," and the inspirational "Exodus." Boy's Ensemble had their time of glory with "Watching All the Girls Go By." The auditorium hushed when Girls Ensemble sang "An Evening Scene." "Carnival of Melody" a series of love songs was performed by Girls Choir. Mixed Glee wore sombreros while singing a song from Mexican folklore.

As the final number, all the Choirs combined to bring the house down with "Oklohomoma."

School spirit displayed during homecoming

Activities of Homecoming Week climaxed with the parade and game. Judging of the floats was in the school parking lot where the floats gathered for the parade which started at 6:00 p.m. Student Council awarded trophies for winning floats in four categories: Class, Club, Shops, and Individual. Taking first place in these categories in respective order were: Junior Class, Art Club, VICA, and Sandy Bogwell. The Tigers played a close game with a score of 31-28. It was a good game and a difficult one for the Clark Pioneers to win.

In the midst of half-time celebrations, Pam Van Dusen was crowned Homecoming Queen. Completing her court were: Debbie Lindsey, senior princess, escorted by Chris Lentz; Pam Nightingale, junior princess, escorted by Chuck Sowyer; Gwen Burns, sophomore princess, escorted by Jim Behling; and Linda Tyler, freshman princess, escorted by Jim Fronczyk. Pam Van Dusen was escorted by Bill Bowers. Homecoming festivities were concluded by the Homecoming dance the following evening with the Enchanters.

Vocational courses along with college

Hommond Technical Vocational High School provides the training facilities for technical and vocational education. This is Tech's policy: That each student should be given an education in accordance with the limit of his capacity to learn and benefit therefrom. It is the purpose of Tech to help each student attain a sound academic background and marketable vocational skills in home economics, business, and industry.

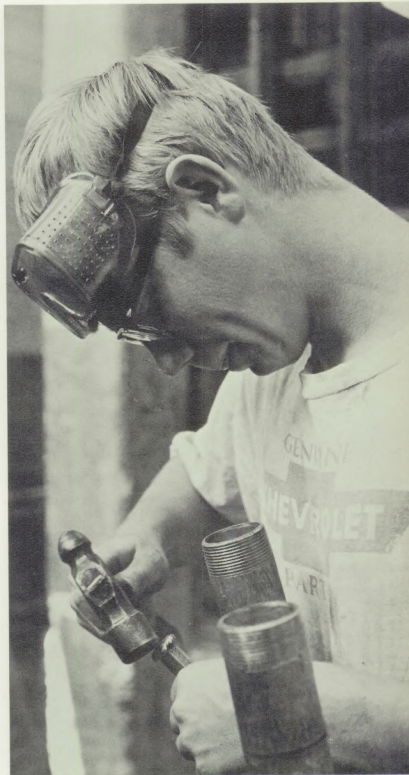

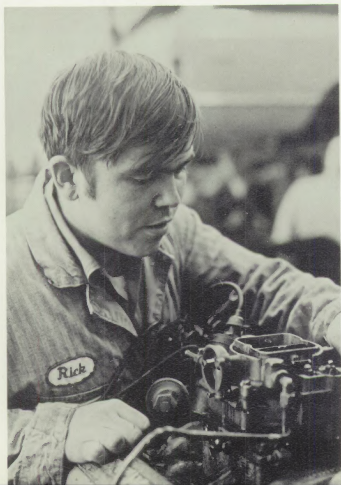

Students who are terminating their formal education with high school have special needs which can be met through vocational training and guidance. Tech, being one of the few vocational high schools in Indiana is well-equipped to meet these needs by preparing the students for the world of business and industry.

College-bound students also have special needs which Tech meets with a college preparatory course. This course gives these students the academic background necessary to succeed in college.

Sports play an important part in the life of Tech. Everyone can participate—either as players or spectators.

Co-captains Villarruel and Bean led the Tech Football Team to a final record of 6-3. A 12-0 victory over arch-rival Hammond High was the climax of the 1969 season.

Interest in the Tech Tennis Team has increased as a result of recent improvement. Major letters were awarded to two freshmen.

Freshmen of the Cross Country Team brought the year to a close by capturing the city championship title. Varsity stood fifth in the Final Western Alliance.

An important ingredient in school sports is spirit in the audience. Cheerleaders, pom pon girls, letter girls, majorettes, the Tiger Band, and Tech's Adult Athletic Association work to build this spirit and boost the team's morale.

Involvement—a key word in school life

Involvement is important to the life of every Tech student. School activities are versatile in order to give everyone an opportunity to become involved.

For some students this means working as cashier in the cafeteria, sharing a locker with a friend, or doing research in the library. For others it is practicing stage make-up in a drama class, playing practical jokes at the lunch table, or serving the school and community through the various clubs.

Many clubs and organizations participate in yearly philanthropy projects to aid the community. Besides collecting and distributing food baskets and rebuilt toys to needy persons, Tech groups participated in the Community Chest Drive.

Students toured Mount Vernon and could visit the wharf where George Washington kept his boats on the Potomac River.

Danna Banik and Jim Behling, Debbie Lindsay and Randy Relinski, and Rhea Berealas and John Coulis participate in the Grand March.

Prom, tour highlight high school life

Magic Moments was the theme of the Jr.-Sr. Prom on the evening of May 9, 1969 which was held at St. Michael's Hall. The atmosphere of the special occasion was set by silhouettes, a cart of flowers, and formal attire. Buddy Presner and his Orchestra provided the music. The Prom was a great success and was a meaningful experience to both the Juniors and Seniors. The Post-Prom Party was held at Son Remos Restaurant and was sponsored by the Tech P.T.A.

Juniors and Seniors from Tech joined students from other Hammond Public Schools for the annual eight-day, New York-Washington tour. Students arrived in Washington on Wednesday aboard the Erie-Lackawanna where they spent two and a half days visiting the monuments, government buildings, and other places of interest. Friday evening buses transferred the group to New York and students could see the Statue of Liberty, U.N. Building, and Empire State Building.

No trip to Washington would be complete without a tour through the White House.

Combined efforts yield "Music Man"

"Music Man" was given on April 10 and 11. Concert Choir members had the lead roles and made up the singing chorus of the townspeople. The entire choral department worked on the production as band members, dancers, stage crew, costumes, ushers, and ticket sellers. Miss Snyder directed. Mrs. Blondford composed and directed all choreography. Miss Bohling designed and supervised the construction of all sets and props.

Members of the Calumet Youth Orchestra will perform for the musical accompaniment.

The story of "The Music Man" is humorous. It derives its humor from the attitudes of small-town lowans. They don't think they're funny, in fact, they're very serious; but from the audience's point of view, they aren't as important as they think.

"Music Man" is the first musical that Tech has produced since 1965, when the Concert Choir presented "South Pacific."

All participating students from the high schools in this district came to Tech, January 31, 1970, for the annual Solo-Ensemble Contest, which is sponsored by NISBOVA.

Tech had seventy-eight students entering in the solo contest, and six ensemble groups.

Two of the ensembles received a superior rating in the first division, and they attended the state contest on February 21, 1970. Tech had three soloists to receive a superior rating in the first division in the district, and they too entered the state solo contest.

To be eligible to go to state, the first or advanced division had to be entered in the district contest, and place a superior in that division.

Each soloist or ensemble is evaluated according to Intonation, tone quality, interpretation and general musicianship, diction, rhythmic accuracy, stage presentation and appearance, and memory. Each soloist or ensemble is rated as: superior, good, fair, poor, or unsatisfactory. Tech had thirteen superior ratings, nine good ratings, and three fair ratings at district.

The district winners went to the state contest at Butler University in Indianapolis, Indiana, February 21. Tech had one ensemble to receive a first at state, and one soloist, Nancy Reed, to receive a first. The ensemble consisted of Concert Choir students Jim Lewis, Jim Strohl, Jim Elmore, Mike Ahlbore, Willy Liggins, Richard Whitmore, Nancy Reed, Sharon Scott, Joan O'Neal, and Jean O'Neal.

Homecoming

activities boost spirit

This year's Homecoming was of excitement and participation among Tech students. Homecoming started off with a week set aside just for planning and boosting our Tech Tigers. These plans were made by the Student Council and Cheerleaders. The week of October 13 through 17 had been designated as homecoming week. Monday started things off as Sweatshirt Day, after school there was a pushball contest between the freshmen and sophomore boys. The freshmen won. Tuesday was Class Color Day. Each class wore their class color. Freshmen in green, sophomores in red, juniors in blue, and the seniors in brown and gold. Wednesday was Mod Day. All over the school you could see the latest fashions on Tech students, and surprisingly enough, on many of the faculty members. Thursday was Bermuda Day. Also, on Thursday after school, was the junior and senior girls football game. This was a new activity introduced into homecoming week. The junior girls rose above the seniors with a score of 22 to 6. Friday was loyalty day. The Tech students and faculty displayed their pride for Tech by wearing the school colors, brown and gold.

Training

In physics class, Tom Graska and Joe Zalewski are working on an experiment in sound.

Science creates new interests for students

Many students enjoy the various types of science classes at Tech. All of the classes give the students a chance to participate in experiments and other class discussions. Those on the Technical Course are required to take chemistry, physics, and biology. On the Vocational Course, general science and physical are required.

In the chemistry classes students look forward to Lab periods. At this time the students may work at their own speed and use the basic rules they have learned in different formulas.

Biology classes give beginning science students an opportunity to develop an understanding of biological terms and use of various equipment in the biology rooms, such as microscopes, and models of plants and organs.

The growth of plants and animals is utilized in the growing room. In this way students are able to watch the growth and development of the plants they have planted themselves or the animals they have raised.

Health and safety is usually taken by freshmen. This class teaches the basic fundamentals and functions of our body. This class leads on to the study of more advanced science classes.

Physics is the introduction to the elementary concepts of physical science and other necessary principles.

Pam Scheive learns the proper use of the microscope in Biology I.

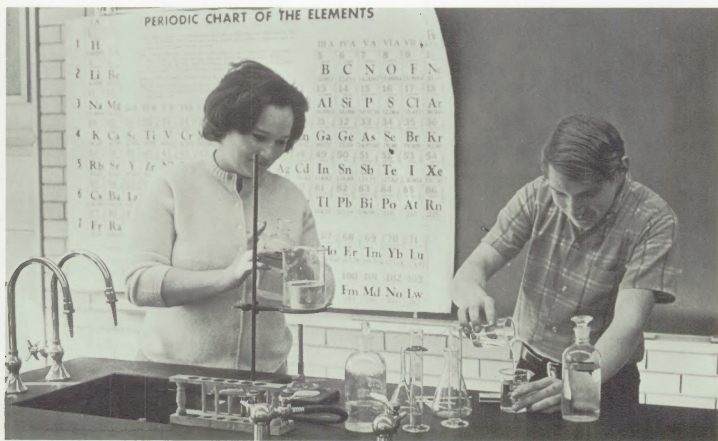

The growth rate of a plant is checked by Charlene Orzechowicz in biology.

Setting up a distillation process in Chemistry I, are Linda Fultman and Ed Jones.

During Chemistry II class, Jane Moyer and Dave Tunis demonstrate a "clock reaction."

Social studies students

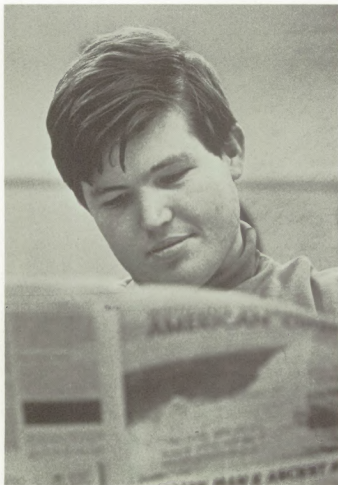

Tech students are learning not only the current events of today's world, but also the history of yesterday's world. As freshmen, they study geography, which is a study of the land, climates, and people.

Knowledge of our world, its people—past and present—is attained in world history during the sophomore year.

Juniors take U.S. History. In this class they are presented the background of our American heritage. The first semester includes the study of different political parties and the Civil War, while the second semester is concerned with World Wars I and II.

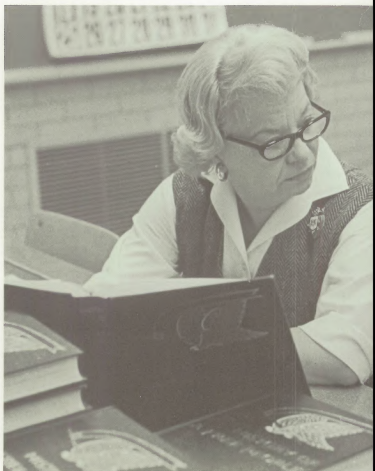

Government is taken by seniors. It explains how our country functions. Economics, also a senior class, explains about the financial status of the United States—including consuming, producing, and the system of exchange and distribution.

All of these social studies classes help the Tech students become aware of and understand better the peoples around them, and throughout the world.

In geography class, Nicky Houser listens to Mr. Lentvorsky's discussion.

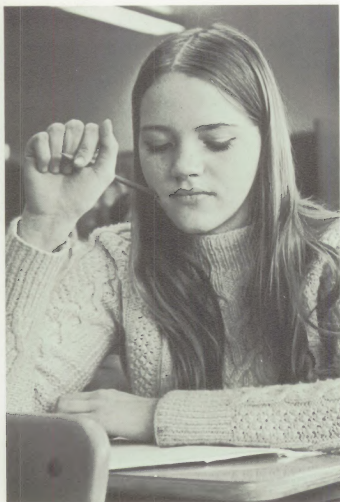

Using a map in World History II, Wanda Story locates major cities in the Soviet Union.

Journalism students work on their semester project, The Cub Times.

Tony Smith and Linda Leicht gather materials in the library for a demonstration speech in English 3.

Virginio Schubach composes a theme in English 1.

English improves communication skills

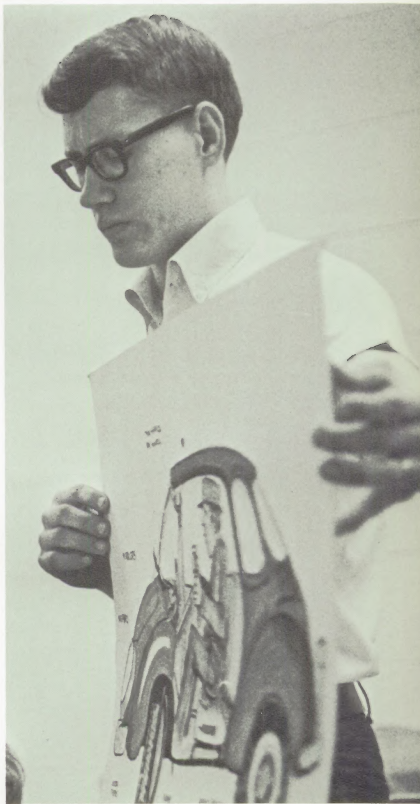

Communication is very important in today's world. In order to help them learn to more efficiently communicate, all students are required to take at least six semesters of English, and most must take eight.

Grammar and composition classes increase the students' understanding of the use of the English language to help them learn to express their ideas correctly and impressively.

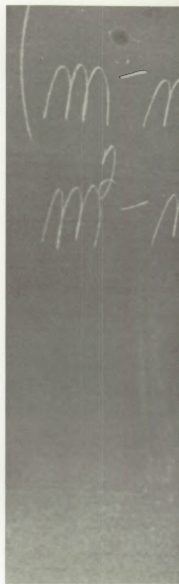

In speech classes they learn how to verbally express themselves through demonstration speeches, speeches with visual aids, discussion groups of various kinds; each emphasizing both participation and leadership.

The various literature classes provide the opportunity to study works of contemporary writers as well as the old classics. This involves many kinds of writing, including poetry, plays, novels, and short stories.

Also, if students wish, they may take journalism in place of English 5. In this class they learn the fundamentals of publishing school newspapers and yearbooks.

Billy Watson uses visual aids during a group discussion in Mrs. Kackley's English 7 class.

Math courses teach how to solve problems

Tech has several math courses: General math, algebra, geometry, advanced algebra, trigonometry, and analysis.

General math gives a basic understanding of measurements, some algebra and general every-day math problems.

Algebra students acquire basic skills of more advanced mathematics and an understanding of complex numbers.

The geometry taught at Tech is mostly plane geometry. This develops the ability of inductive and deductive thinking utilized, then, in problem solving.

Advanced algebra goes more deeply into the graphs and equations than Algebra 1 and 2 introduced.

Trigonometry students are busy solving triangles by computation. This is used in surveying, navigation, construction and other branches of science.

Analysis includes algebra and calculus. It is simply an analysis of various problems, and the methods of solving them.

These math courses prepare Tech students for teaching, engineering, scientific and mathematical research, and for almost any kind of math problem they may have to solve in their daily life in the community.

Alan Pearson explains an equation to his algebra class.

Classes oriented to student speed, ability

Mr. Scofield's math student, Rudy Undraitis, works a problem at the board.

Tech provides a very special and important program for the students who find regular classes difficult. These classes work at a slower rate which enables the students to learn at their own individual capacity for learning. When the students work at their own speed and at their own level, they find it easier to comprehend the material in the classes.

These classes help the students learn the basic requirements of the regular classes in which he requires additional help. Classes offered on this program are science, history, social studies and others.

In the English class, the students progress into learning to read and spell more efficiently. In the math classes they learn the basic fundamentals of adding and subtracting, and other things essential to every-day business transactions.

The developmental classes help the student feel at ease in learning and obtaining as much knowledge as possible. Often students are moved on to the regular classes after a short period of time.

Joyce Brown and Patty Davidson prepare for test from social studies papers.

Gory Stimler puts together an English project in Mrs. Vrehas' English class.

Malinda Sims finishes a display on Biafra for English class.

Judy Henson and Karen Elboar learn about volume in Mrs. Rudd's math class.

Students show expression in Fine Arts

Mixed Glee practices to overcome trouble spots.

Fine arts are, and always will be a change to Tech students. The students have a wide selection to choose from. Instrumental and vocal music help the students perform in front of an audience, and on stage.

In vocal music goals for the students are: for each student to feel a sense of accomplishment; feel that they are helping create something beautiful and worth while. The main goal is beautiful singing. Every group of students work on tone quality proper breathing, and basic musicianship.

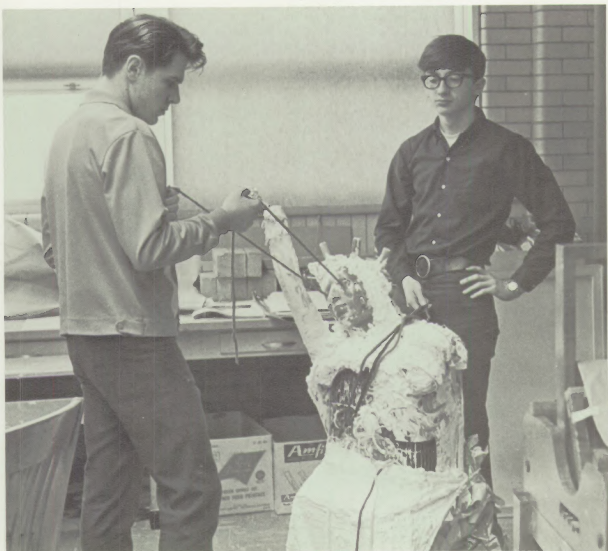

There are groups divided from vocal music. For freshmen there is girls chorus, and boys chorus. Then there are mixed glee, girls choir, concert choir and folksingers. Besides these, there are ensembles.

There's also the art department. Tech has a choice between classroom program or shop. This class is interesting and it fascinates many students whether talented or just interested in art.

Tech also has another class which was put into our fine arts section-Drama. The purpose in this is to help the students to perform on stage and in front of an audience. Tech Little Theater puts on several plays. Some students are interested in acting when others are interested in scenery and working back stage.

Ted Murphey and Dixie Harrison measure plastic for production of "Music Man."

Joe Juskiewicz and Ray Smith make a replica of the Statue of Liberty.

Ron Hoholek practices on the cornet in instrumental band.

Maria Garcia, Ron Kozlowski and Maxine Harvatich are breaking a piñata.

Spanish students explore different cultures

Rozanne Behling is aided with her Spanish lesson by Nina Manza.

Studying foreign languages is becoming more popular with students. They enjoy learning to speak another language; it helps them better to understand other people of the world as well as their own culture and language.

A foreign language is required on the college preparatory course and is usually taken in place of advanced mathematics, although it may be taken as an elective. Most of the foreign language students at Tech study Spanish, although they may take other languages at neighboring Hommond High.

Usually students only take two years of Spanish but more has been given when students were eligible.

Maggie Reyes and Cannie Taylor look over the Spanish display case which they put together.

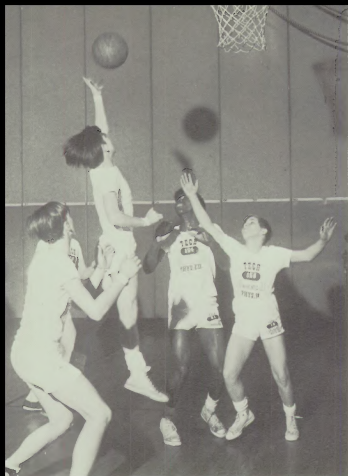

Physical fitness impressed upon Freshmen

In order to do their best in classes or at work, students must be physically fit. One year of physical fitness improvement is required of all Tech students through physical education classes.

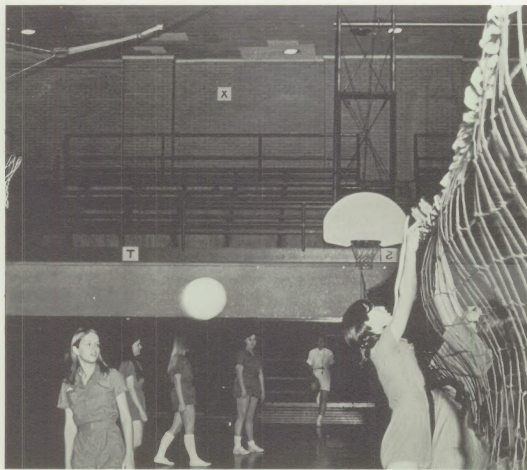

The girls' classes include out-of-doors baseball and kickball games, volleyball, square dancing, and gymnastics, which involves working out on mats, parallel bars, the trampoline, the rope and the horse.

Boys, too, play basketball and basketball. In addition, they play football, and take swimming. The boys' classes participate in the President's Physical Fitness Program. Through these classes the students learn not only the proper rules of the various games, but also good sportsmanship, which is important in the world of studies and jobs as well as that of gym classes.

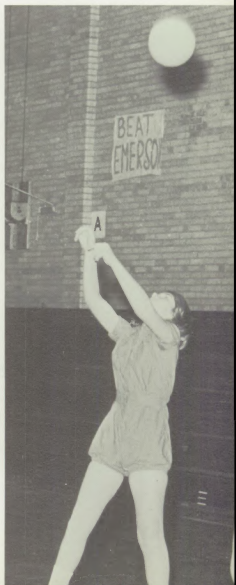

A student in gym practices the fundamentals before going on to volleyball.

Freshmen boys show their sportsmanship in a game of basketball.

In gym, freshmen girls enjoy many sports including volleyball.

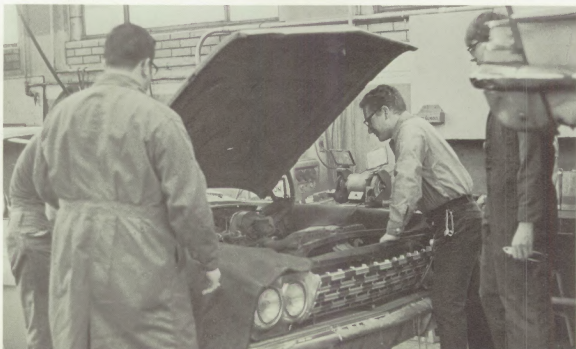

With the supervision of Mr. Delaney, Kevin Hayes and Gus Mellado prepare a 4-color project in print shop.

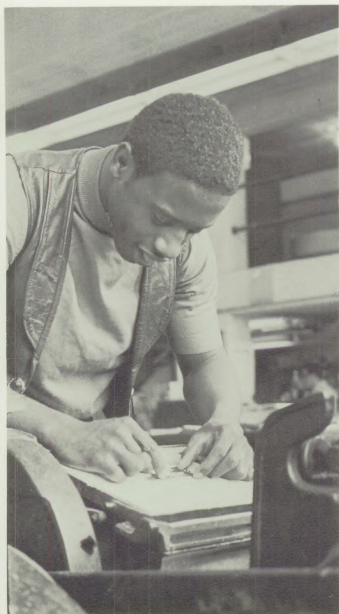

Printing and auto give boys experience

Student teacher in auto shop, Mr. Teeter, looks on as Paul DePaula and Mike Wagner tune-up an engine.

In printing, everyone learns to use the hand press as Dave Brown demonstrates.

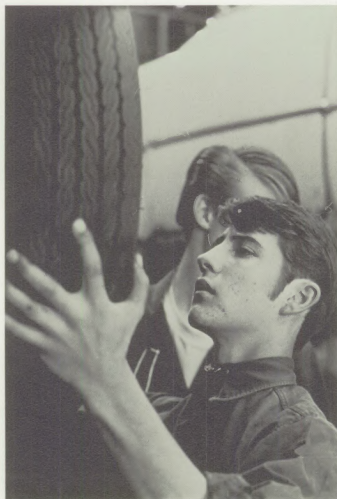

In auto shop, John Adams replaces the radiator in a car.

Print shop is an aid to the entire school along with teaching Tech boys the occupation of printing. Many boys take up to as many as six semesters of printing, while others go on to on-the-job training. At this time they are able to use their skills on-the-job. In print shop the boys learn the basic fundamentals of film and plates, offset printing, and they also learn the operation of the Platen and Lithopress.

Tech is one of the few schools that offers auto shop. Auto I is basically preparing the boys for further training in working with cars. They learn the basic parts of an engine and also learn how to repair them. Taking apart and reassembling the two-cycle engine and working on brakes and transmission is all part of Auto I.

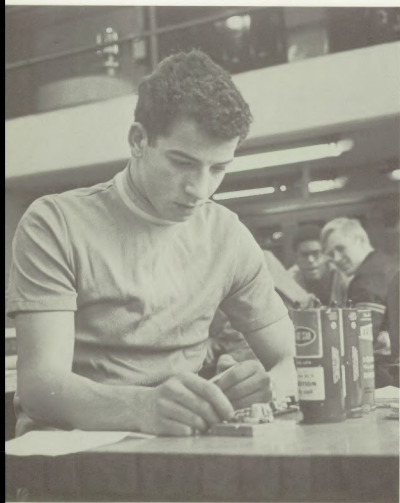

Auto II consists of putting to use the knowledge students learned in Auto I. The basic thing that is stressed is mostly the repair and maintenance of cars. Many boys, as well as teachers, bring in their cars to be worked on by the boys in Auto shop. After this course, many boys continue in the career of becoming a mechanic.

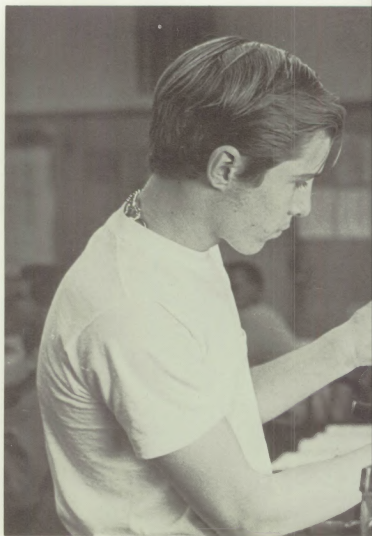

Adjusting a car axle in auto shop are Dennis Brewster and Tom Love.

In exploratory drafting Robert Wilbert is working with a T-Square.

Charles Chaufour experiments with batteries in exploratory electric shop.

John Dazey works on his project with a lathe in exploratory metals.

Freshmen boys determine interests from exploratory shops

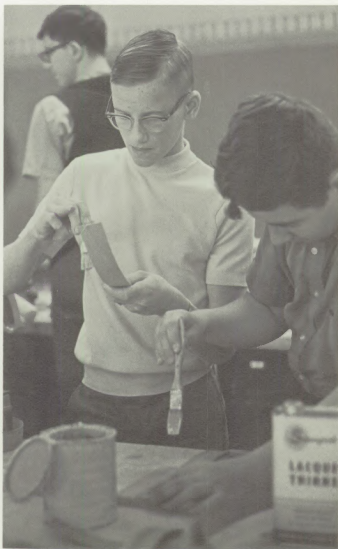

Most freshmen boys start out in exploratory shops. These classes are for only half a semester, but give the students an idea of the vocation they would like to enter into.

There are four different shops to rotate in: Exploratory Electric, Exploratory Wood, Exploratory Metals and Exploratory Graphics, boys are usually able to find the shop that appeals to them the most. Exploratory wood teaches the boys how to use various kinds of woodworking tools, the simple rules of cutting, driving nails, and sanding. They use the tools and other equipment in wood shop to make their project the best possible.

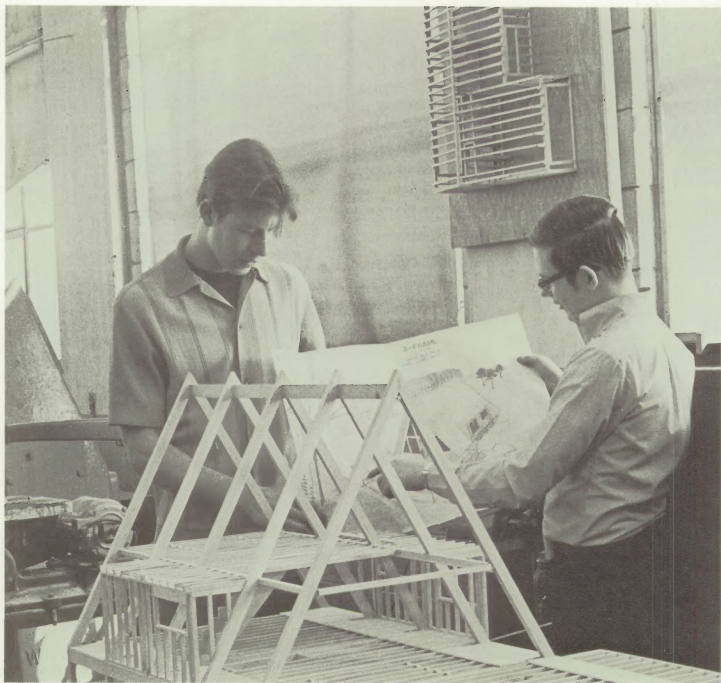

Exploratory Graphics have to do with mechanical drawing, printing, sketching and the use of transparencies, films and slides to show different text material. This shop helps many of the boys find the talent in themselves to become a good draftsman.

Exploratory electric shows the boys the most important rules of working with electricity. They work with various instruments which enable them to learn about making wire, simple circuits, splices, calculate current, voltage, and resistance.

Exploratory metal enables students to work with metal in several different fields. They may work in welding, sheet metal, foundry and forge and metal work. There are many different machines at the boys disposal. They may work on machines used for cutting and shaping. They use these machines to complete and do their required projects.

Mike Jusko and Larry Shaller paint their project in exploratory wood shop.

In carpentry, Carrell Anderson and Ricky Ernst compare their finished product to the plans for an "A-frame" house.

Finished products show talent and skill

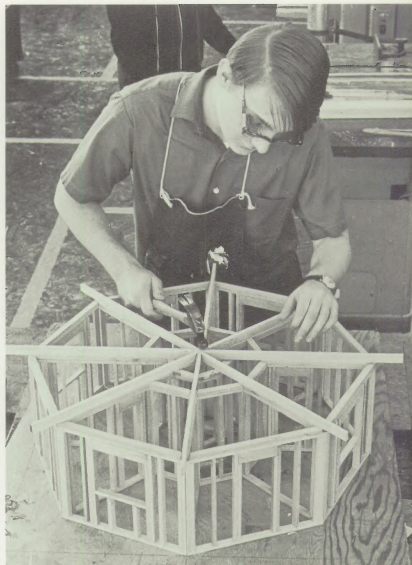

Pattern shop is another one of the boys shops that is not required. It is a six semester shop which is enjoyed by many. The semesters are split up so the boys learn things in the proper order and learn how to use them at the proper time. The first two semesters teach the boys how to use hand and power tools, along with learning the basic fundamentals of the ruler. This class works at their own speed. They eventually learn how to run the jigsaw and other power machines. They learn about such things as estimation, classification, and joinery and wood. Pattern making is run along these same lines of working. It helps the boys to become more familiar with how patterns are made and how the actual molding and putting together of material are done.

Carpentry shop teaches the student to construct and plan model homes and garages. They go by the blueprints to make these projects. There is a great use of portable machinery. In the working they use design, selection and layout of lumber. There are many basic rules that are very much stressed in this shop. It all leads to a very pleasing project.

Larry Stover clamps his project together in pattern shop.

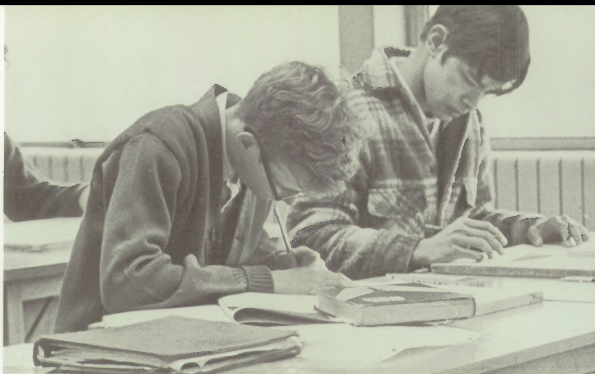

Jim Lemke works on his octagon house in carpentry shop.

Kenny Ilant and Bob Knight display the bookcase they made in pattern shop.

Edgar Fenstermacher and Paul Gonzales sketch their first blueprint in drafting.

Drafting requires a steady hand

Drafting is not a required shop although many boys take it. It is a three hour shop. The boys in this class are able to work at their own speed. There are different jobs to be completed by each boy. The first step in drafting is to learn the names and uses of the equipment used in this shop. They study books and drawings to get an idea of the different kinds of jobs they would like to do. Examples also give the boys an idea of what they would like to do. Within the drafting shop there is a blue print machine which the students are allowed to use. This machine makes blueprints and reprints of the boys work. They draw a pattern and this machine reprints what they have drawn.

Mechanical drawing is taken by many students. This shop is another one that lets the boys work at their own speed. It teaches the boy how to use some of the sketches they have been making on the job in construction. The boys are always proud of the finished product.

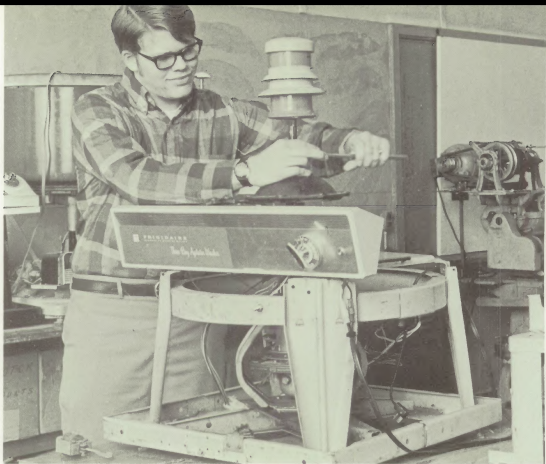

Jim Franczyk and Richard Jezuit are drafting a layout.

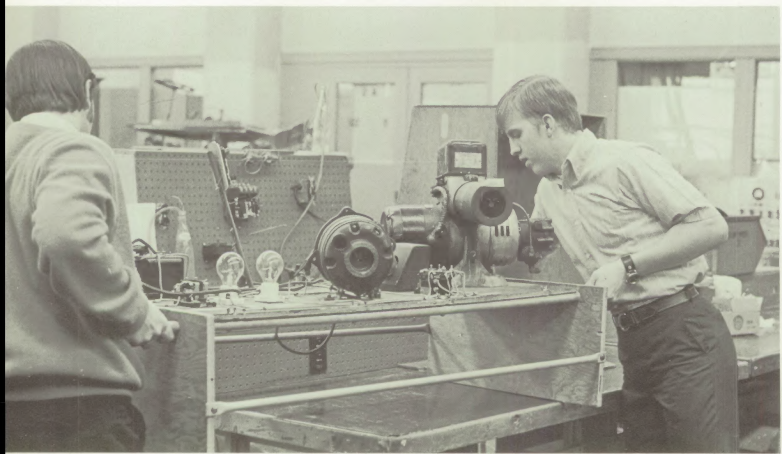

Phillip LaBelle and Newton Sewell show different types of procedures in drafting.

In home appliance, Dave Medcalf repairs a cycle on an agitator of a washer.

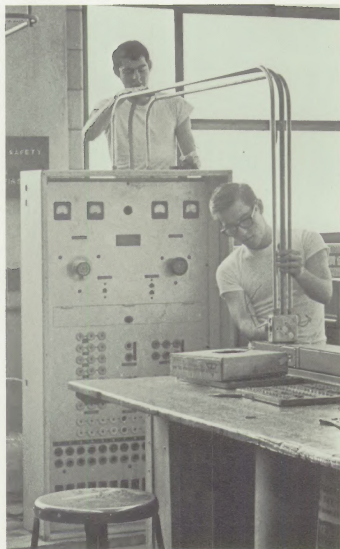

Home appliance, electric geared for careers

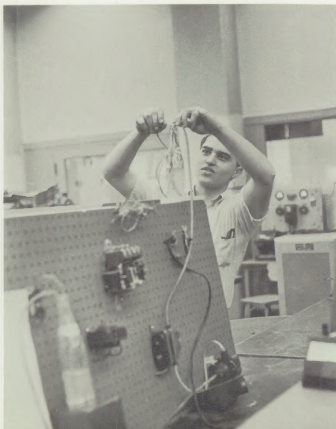

Tom Morse and George Donelson get ready to test a motor in electric shop.

David Pigg tests voltage on a washing machine in home appliance shop.

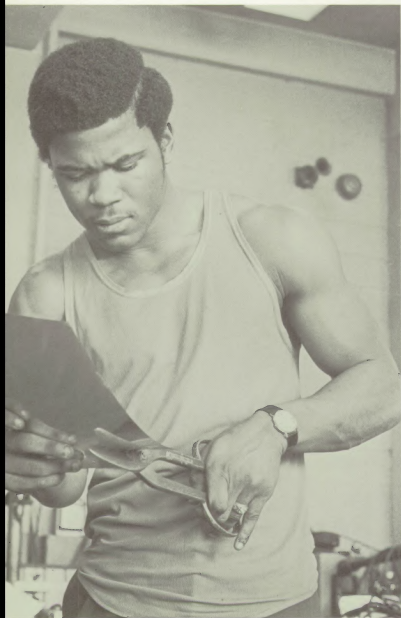

In electric shop, Bernie Malacina and Chuck Sawyer are running wire into a control panel.

Many boys take home appliance shop for two to three hours each day. The boys work on various appliances in this shop. They learn the rules of using different tools and they learn the necessary skills of fixing home appliances. These boys fix washing machines, televisions, radios, toasters, and many other appliances used in the home. Some of these things come into the shop in very bad condition but the boys use the skills they have learned and are able to fix the appliances back in working order.

Electric shop deals with all the basic fundamentals of electricity and all the phases of wiring a house. There is a lot of electrical terminology and many rules to be learned. Many boys make careers of electricians. These shops help them to decide if the position of an electrician is right for them.

In metal shop, Roy Thomas cuts a piece of metal for his project.

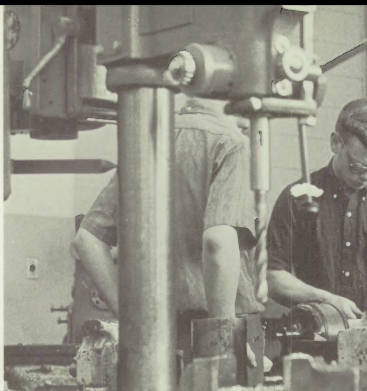

Pipefitting gives students a chance to actually work with circulation systems. They become experienced in cutting, threading and assembling pipes. When they complete their training at Tech, they are ready to go either directly into a job requiring his skills or he becomes an apprentice.

Boys in Sheet Metal shop learn how to design and use blueprints, set up layout work and fabrication. Students learn to make various things for use in other shops. Boys who take this shop find it much easier to find a job of similar interest when they graduate.

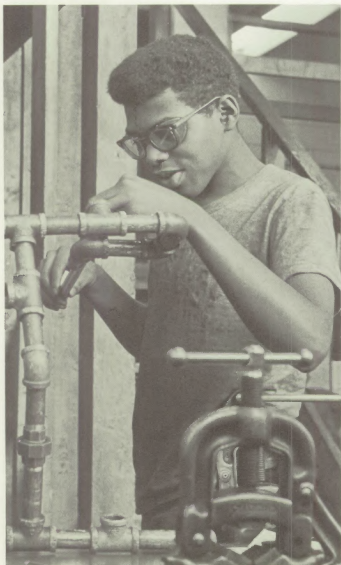

Forge-Foundry shop teaches boys how to make and use sand molds. They are also taught how to shape malleable metals.

Machine shop offers many opportunities for the students interested in the operation and maintenance of different machines.

Students in Welding shop are taught how to repair their own equipment. They are given training in oxyacetylene and electric arc welding. The Junior and Senior students are offered an 18 week introductory course, which will enable them to enter directly into an apprenticeship or as a certified welder.

Larry Hubbard and John Houstey work in machine shop.

Jimmy Williams discovers that one of the basic requirements in pipefitting is to put together a beginning pipe work job.

Bill Slade tests a bildge pump in machine shop while being supervised by Mr. Lazarz and fellow students.

Shops prepare students for future work

Herman Stokes draws the plans to a restaurant in Fundamental Foods.

Wilbur Handy inspects the pots and pans.

Students cooperate with cafeteria staff

How many potatoes must be peeled to feed 1,000 people? Students in the 3-year Vocational Food Service Program know the answer to this question and many others concerning the production phase of food preparation.

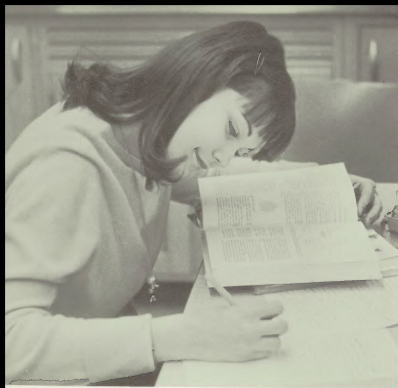

This shop differs from others because instead of doing "pretend" jobs, the students actually help prepare the food sold in the school cafeteria. It is the closest thing to actual restaurant work.

Many of the students are on the work program, in addition to their work at school, and are now serving at various places in the community and out, including a hospital, a country club, and an atomic submarine!

Some students pursue this field in college or in a professional chefs school after graduation.

Rose Jones, Steve Lopez, and Robert Rardin prepare mashed potatoes for lunch.

Penny Juergens studies nutrition in foods class.

All freshmen girls are required to take one semester of clothing. After this they may decide to continue in this particular area of work; if so, there are two other clothing courses offered. Clothing 2 and advanced clothing. Each semester the girls that participate in the class have requirements, which consist of a number of articles to be completed. The articles, depending on their quality, determine the final semester grade. During the semester the girls are required to try their handy work at different types of materials, including wool, cottons, silk, velveteen, and some also try jersey. The styles range from maxi-skirts to mini-skirts and from summer shorts to slacks and pant-suits.

Food is one of the required shops girls take at Tech. Freshmen girls start out with Foods I. This class gives them the basic fundamentals of cooking small meals and rules for table setting. Foods I trains the girls to arrange their utensils and other cooking equipment in a way that proves to be the most handy in the process of preparing a meal. The girls also learn to make various kinds of cookies and cakes. Many girls wish to continue in foods so they take Foods II, which is more advanced. Larger meals are prepared since the class is a two-hour session. The girls learn to make special casseroles and other dishes.

Girls prepare for roles as homemakers

Vanessa Adcox and Jolene Bell take a test in Mrs. Buckley's clothing class.

Denise Boback chooses thread and bobbin before working on a project.

Debbie Price practices catch stitching on a hem.

Foods student Jackie Carpure prepares to cook by turning on the stove.

Tech gives preparation for home life

During the Freshman year girls are required to take Family Living and Homemaking. In Family Living classes girls discuss some of the things concerned with home life. They obtain a better understanding of getting along with people by group discussions. Homemaking teaches the girls many helpful things about decorating the home. The girls make room plans and learn about color schemes. Demonstrations are given in arrangement of tables and accessories.

Home Management and Home Nursing are taken by girls who wish to proceed further into home economics. These are advanced classes. Home Management provides the knowledge of various electrical appliances in the home and the care of other home equipment. Home Nursing shows the girls how to care for the ill and introduces some rules in child care.

Many students have an interest in working during the day. They apply for jobs that will prepare them for future work after graduating. Cooperative Office Education is taken by Seniors who have an interest in office work. If a student finds that the job he is working seems to fit him and he is quite pleased with it, he may continue with it after graduating. This on-the-job training gives the student a good outlook on future jobs they may have. The job the student acquires under C.O.E. can later be used as a good reference for future work experience.

When a student becomes interested in a career in the field of merchandising and marketing of goods and services he may work on the Distributed Education course. This is another of Tech's on-the-job training benefits. This program is set up on a cooperative basis. The student may work in the afternoons or mornings for a certain period of time. During this time the student will be receiving both school credit and pay from his employer. This gives two good advantages to the student: He is receiving classroom credit and learning from his work experience also.

There is a retailing class offered for both junior and senior boys and girls. This is taken by the students planning to go ahead with the D.E. class. In this class students learn of the different types of marketing and various kinds of distribution. The combination of these things aids them in the job they may have during their senior year. All of these courses, classes, and programs help Tech students be more informed and better qualified to fit into the business world of today.

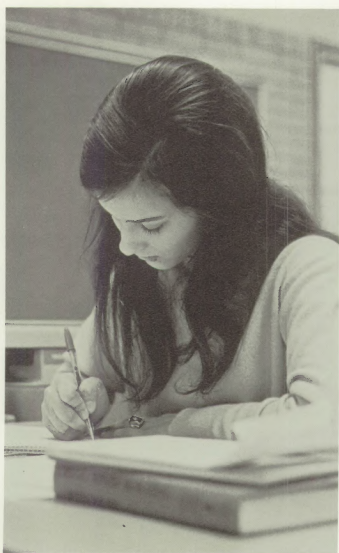

In steno lab, Raina Bryson checks the count on a duplication machine.

Many junior and senior girls take steno and tab lab. These classes work on an office-like basis. The girls have required jobs to complete and they work on them at their own speed. They also learn how to operate various office machines.

Shorthand is a class taken by many of the girls at Tech. They begin with Shorthand I and progress upward to Shorthand II and later some take transcription and steno lab. The girls find that they are able to use their shorthand skills in other classes for notes and other needs.

Tech is fortunate enough to be able to offer computer programming to the students. Many girls who wish to continue with I.B.M. work after graduating take computer programming. This course gives them the experience of working with computers and other I.B.M. machines.

All of these classes prepare Tech girls for future secretarial work. Girls with this training often find themselves obtaining the best jobs and more promotions.

Debbie Dross takes dictation during transcription class.

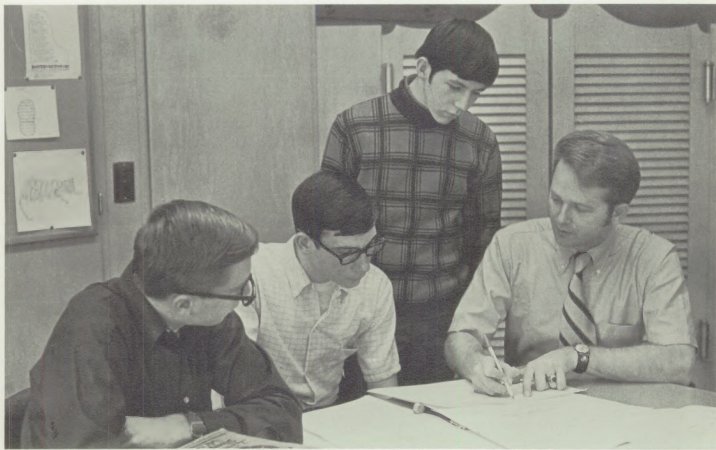

Correcting a typing error in steno lab is Diane Kleinschmidt.

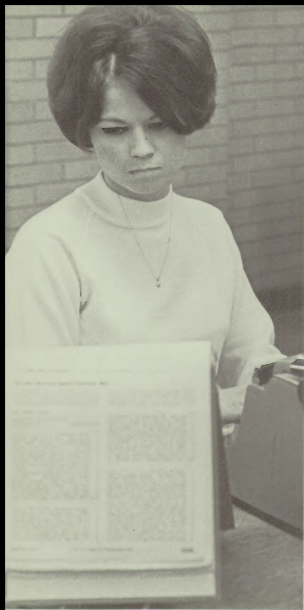

Debbie Lindsey and Barbara Ruczewski operate key punch machines.

Advanced courses prepare students for jobs

Mr. Mazura teaches a code problem during computer programming to Chuck Harris and Gavit students, Brian Mezany and Ted Tyle.

Donna Rixie learns rhythm by typing to music in Typing I.

Gloria Perez uses the rotary comptometer in business machines to total figures.

Kathy Martin and Sharon Green add totals for practice in business machines class.

Pam Nightingale alphabetizes cards in filing class.

Bookkeeping is offered to students on the stenographic and clerical courses. This class shows students how to take care of the books for a business. Students learn how to record transactions into journals and ledgers. If students are interested in this type of work, they can proceed to Bookkeeping II where they go into more detail.

Typing is offered to students interested in further secretarial training. Typing I is given first showing the students the basic rules of typing and getting the student familiar with the keyboard. Typing II consists of teaching the students different kinds of margins and rules for typing letters and forms. Many students continue with typing for more than two years. They build their speed and learn more about centering and other typing rules.

Business machines is a well-liked class taken by many Tech students. The students learn how to operate the various business machines. By the end of the semester the student will have had a chance to work on each of the machines in the room. There are several kinds of machines available. Business machines classes run from one hour to two, depending on the student's wishes.

Filing is one of the basic classes offered on the secretarial course. Students work at their own speed. They learn the general rules in filing and alphabetizing cards. A certain amount of cards must be completed at the end of the semester to obtain a passing grade. The filing classes really are split into two classes. At the middle of the semester students study business law for about three weeks, when they learn the procedures of law and court trials.

Introduction to business consists of showing students how to weight different object. They use the cash register and weigh material so they can use the scales of different machines. They also learn how to count change in the proper way. They also work on issuing receipts and a few other business papers.

Girls further skills in business courses

Jack Johnson prepares to pass in Hammond High game.

The Tigers battle against an opponent.

The 1969-70 football season was successful season for Coach Frank Lentvorsky with 6 wins and 3 losses. The Tiger's first victory was against Gavitt 19-12. Loss number one came when E. C. Roosevelt Rough Riders beat the Tigers 26-20. Tech came back to beat Tech 14-0. The next game marked the most important game of the season. The Tigers shut out the Wildcats 16-0 at the Hammond High Homecoming. Then the Tiger team journeyed to Whiting to beat the Oilers 14-0 on their Homecoming, although the Tigers had bad luck at our Homecoming when the Clark Pioneers stopped us 31-28. In the next two games, the team had their highest scoring wins. Tech over-powered the E.C. Washington Senators 40-6 and the River Forest Ingots 42-8. The last game was one for the whole team to be proud of because every player on the squad was given a chance to play.

Discipline and ability challenge B-team

Neddle Burds manages to foil a tackle in the Morgan Park game.

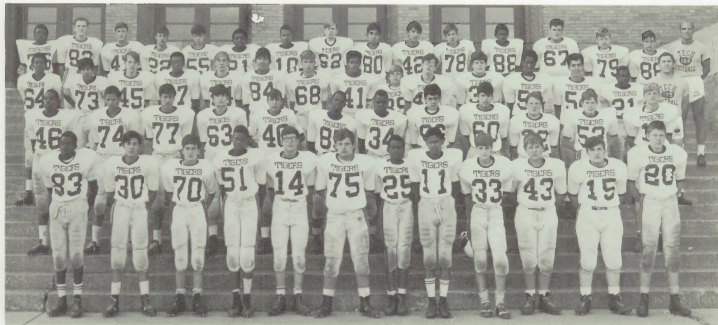

The young Tigers spent a year learning the fundamentals of the game. They learned their lessons well and are now ready for Varsity competition. They know the hurt of defeat and they also know the sweet taste of victory. They found that many sacrifices must be made to attain success. They learned the real meaning of teamwork and the true spirit of brotherhood. The price of success is high but the coaching staff feels that the members of the 1969 B-team have the physical ability and the mental discipline necessary to meet the challenge.

Freshmen footballers learn fundamentals

The freshmen ended the season with 4 wins, 4 losses, and 1 tie. At the end of the season the roster consisted of 58 boys. Due to a late start in practicing, the team was not ready for the first game. Four losses marked the beginning of the season, the first to Gavit 12-6. Then they lost to E.C. Roosevelt 12-0. The low morale showed in the next game as the freshmen lost to Lake Calumet Township 20-6. A tough Morton team also beat the Tigers 14-0. A tie to H.H.S. made the boys feel like a team with a final score 12-12. The freshmen beat Whiting 28-0, and Clark 28-14. Then they managed an 8-6 victory over E.C. Washington. The highlight of the season was a 44-10 victory over Bishop Noll. The freshmen totaled 132 points to 100 points of their opponents.

Class of '70 ends stay with diplomas

Officers of the Senior Class were Donna Banik, President, Pam Hines, Secretary, Rhea Bereolos, Treasurer, Pam Miles, Social Chairman, Not pictured.

Four years of school have come to a close for the seniors. They are now leaving Tech with diplomas of outstanding achievement to face their first year as alumni, and unforgettable memories.

The memories ranged from the first day at Tech, stumbling from room to room, meeting new teachers and future friends, to Graduation Day, when one of the many goals of the Class of 1970 was reached.

As freshmen and sophomores, high school life and new independence was experienced. Upon becoming upper-classmen, responsibilities increased as well as independence at Tech.

During the freshman and junior years, individuals' potentials and talents were extended to the public by taking part in the Tech Spectacular. The class ventured into many other activities including: Assemblies, sports, dances, vocal and band concerts, and many plays given by the drama department.

As juniors, a party was sponsored for the Seniors of 1969 entitled, "Cowboys and Indians." In the latter part of the year the Class of '70 enjoyed a party sponsored by the then seniors.

The senior year at Tech has been the most eventful of the four-year stay. At the 1970 Homecoming Pam Van-Dusen was crowned the Queen after a week of excitement and the best parade seen during their four years at Tech. For the juniors, the Senior Class sponsored a party, entitled "Do Your Thing."

To add to many worthwhile expenses of the senior year came senior pictures, (taken by Bodie Studio), announcements (from Herff Jones), and caps and gowns (by Collegiate Cap and Gown Company).

In February the Senior Mirror Awards were presented to the Senior Class at a party given by the juniors. The traditional Senior Dinner was held, and the most exciting and formal occasion of the year was the Prom, on May 15.

The Senior Class play whored our dramatic abilities and proved to be a great success. After Senior Week finally came, commencement brought the class of '70 to a close; classmates are now departing to seek their desired vocations and careers.

The Class of '70 leaves Tech with its four years' of accomplishments and leaves with the greatest possible hopes of the future and something special called "TIGERISM."

There are times, when the going gets tough and you feel that as being editor you are faced with the heavy responsibility of putting out a yearbook. In the end, though, you find that you can sit down and relax while thinking of memories of putting out this yearbook and you find that it was worth all the time and effort put into it.

I must acknowledge, first of all, my indebtedness to Mrs. Myers for her hard work and firm belief in me during the preparation of this book. I would like to thank Al Schlegelmilch, of Paragon Press, for his help whenever we asked for assistance. I must also express my gratitude to Harry, our photographer from Bodie Studios, for getting our last minute pictures . . . right up to the final deadline.

I could make a list of staff members whose hard work I am thankful for. However, they know who they are and what they should be thanked for, with the exception of one whom deserves extra recognition. Sincerest thanks are due to Debbie MacCortney for all her work without tiring or complaint.

I'll never forget the memories of how hectic it was putting this book out. I can also say I don't know when I've had as much enjoyment in my life as I did working on this yearbook.
